Leading the IT Outsourcing Challenge

Between 1995 and 2005 global IT outsourcing went mainstream and became an integral part of every CIO's & CTO's strategy. By end of this period the question being asked from every a large corporation was not if they used offshore but how were they using India- or China-based offshore services in their strategy. Further buoyed by the economic downturn, by end of 2010 if you were not using offshore services as an IT manager, you were not being efficient.

While there are companies located in the Mid-West that provide some competition to offshore companies, over the past few years as technology and development methodologies have evolved, we are seeing a new wave of trends leading to a reversal of the offshoring trend.

Allyis is leading that charge in the PacWest by working with local companies to help bring more rigor and optimize outsourcing for their project. Allyis is actively competing with offshore companies and has been successful in establishing that the ROI through local outsourcing is much higher than offshore outsourcing while keeping Total Cost of Ownership (TCO) low.

We call our model "GreenShoring."

What is GreenShoring?

"GreenShoring enables a service provider to achieve the client goals from outsourcing while being close to the customer. This allows for the use of locally available talent, minimal travel and optimized use of all available resources thereby helping to create a more "Green" footprint. GreenShoring is also unique in that the cost of meeting deliverables can be comparable with offshore service providers.

GreenShoring differs from NearShoring, RuralShoring or FarmShoring. While NearShoring typically refers to the Latin America region, Rural or FarmShoring generally refer to servicing the client out of the Mid-Western states. GreenShoring is truly an advanced form of outsourcing as you are practically in the same zip code, more often than not, as your client.

Offshoring Myths

Allyis has been successful in breaking down the various myths of offshore such as:

- Myth 1: Reduced Labor Cost
- Myth 2: No Hidden Labor Costs
- Myth 3: High Productivity
- Myth 4: Managing Remotely is Cost Effective
- Myth 5: Offshore gives us a 24 X 7 workaround which makes us more efficient

Doing the Math: Does offshoring really result in savings?

Today large multi-nationals like GM and the pioneer of offshoring, GE, are bringing work back to Detroit, Austin, Chicago and New York because they discovered the pitfalls of offshoring and are now focused on the benefits of local outsourcing. To support this, even CEOs of local outsourcing companies have given depositions in Congress on why local outsourcing can not only compete against offshoring, but do a better job of executing on projects.

Advantages of Allyis' GreenShore Model

- Greater ownership and accountability from the supplier
- Higher productivity when compared to offshore
- Significantly lower attrition
- Clear communication and expectation
- Precise project management
- Lower cost of training and transition
- Greater work- life balance
- No work visa related risks
- Better protection of intellectual property

GreenShoring is growing and Allyis is at the cutting-edge of change in how outsourcing should be done. Contact us today to hear how we can increase the productivity of your outsourced services!

How to Choose a Home

Here are some tips to help determine which house is best for you.

Once you've settled on a couple of preferred neighborhoods for your home search, it's time to pick out a few homes to view. Having a house features "wish list" keeps you focused on which features are most important to you. Be sure the list has these components: Must Have, Can't Stand & Nice to Have.

When narrowing down your home search, consider the following:

- know what type of home you want to buy (condo, townhouse, single family home)
- determine what age and condition of the house you want to buy
- consider resale potential (Sandy & her team can help you with this)
- use a features wish list to keep focused (your Must haves/Can't stands)
- use a home search comparison chart to keep organized
- take notes as you tour homes to help keep them straight
- act decisively when you find the right home

Determine What Type of Home You Want to Buy

There are several forms of home ownership: single-family homes, multiple-family homes, condominiums and co-ops.

- Single-family homes: One home per lot
- Condominiums: With a condo, you own "from the walls inward." You also own a certain percentage of the "common elements" - staircases, sidewalks, roofs, etc. Monthly charges pay your share of taxes and insurance on those elements, as well as repairs and maintenance. A homeowner's association administers the development

Decide What Age and Condition of Home You Want to Purchase

Weigh your needs, budget and personal tastes in deciding whether you want to buy a newly constructed home, an older home or a "fixer-upper" that requires some work.

Consider Resale Potential

As you look at homes, you may want to keep in mind these resale considerations.

- One-bedroom condos are more difficult to resell than two-bedroom condos
- Two-bedroom/one-bath single houses generally have less appeal than houses with three or more bedrooms, and therefore have less appreciation potential
- Homes with "curb appeal," i.e., well-maintained, attractive and with a charming appearance from the street, are the easiest to resell
- The most expensive houses on the street, or ones with anything unusual or unique are not suited for resale. The best investment potential is traditionally found in a less expensive, more moderately sized home

Use a Features Wish List to Keep Your Search Focused

Make a features wish list to clarify which features are most and least important to you when looking for a home. Using this features wish list will keep your house hunt focused and effective. Also – remember that the perfect home doesn't exist, and is rather the one you make, so use your list as the benchmark for choosing rather than waiting to find the 'perfect' home.

Use a Home Comparison Chart to Keep Your Observations Organized

While house hunting, it's a good idea to make notes about what you see because viewing several houses at a time can be confusing. Use a home comparison chart to help you keep track of your search, organize your thoughts and record your impressions.

Act Decisively When You Find the Right Home

Before you begin the home buying process, resolve to act promptly when you do find the right house. We have lots of stories to tell about a couple who looked far and wide for their dream home, finally found it, and then said, "We always promised my Dad we'd sleep on it, so we'll make an offer tomorrow." Many times the story had a sad ending - someone else came in that evening with an offer that was accepted.

Resolve that you will act decisively when you find the house that's clearly right for you. This is particularly important after a long search or if the house is newly listed and/or underpriced.
